"We’re here today to commemorate the life of an American that was killed by a Nazi on American soil, let’s say her name: Heather Heyer"

—Mark Ruffalo at the Heather Heyer Vigil, NYC, August 15

Yes to humanity. No to bigotry. pp. 11-15
A wake-up call?

We are aware that there are certain subjects or conversations that are so uncomfortable to entertain that we avoid them completely—even when the tensions are high and the issue at hand is hanging over our heads like a dark, heavy cloud.

Having the conversation with your kids about sex; with an aging parent about a plan of care; with a relative who holds a different political point of view; with a spouse about stagnation in a relationship; with a coworker, neighbor—or even a friend—about race, religion and the state of the world.

While I am not advocating that we immediately upend our lives and talk everything to death or impasse, the times we are living in demand that we engage in the excruciating process of addressing the issue of racism in our country. The rise—or the above ground emergence—of Neo-Nazis, the Ku Klux Klan and White Supremacists simply can no longer be ignored as an ugly fringe element in our nation.

So what can we do?

We need to create “safe spaces” in which people who come from different backgrounds can share their experiences, views, fears, beliefs and prejudices—all with the goal of promoting understanding and empathy. Why is this so hard to do? A safe environment requires the creation of a non-judgmental playing field and a commitment to honestly open our minds.

Since all of us—especially nurses, in spite of our education—tend to be somewhat critical, committing to a non-judgmental frame of mind is as challenging as dealing with an unknowledgeable but arrogant colleague. We live our lives with a set of assumptions—learned from a lifetime of experiences and influences. We also live our lives built on a national history of events, actions, processes and legacies that we have no INDIVIDUAL responsibility for, yet reap the rewards, as well as the penalties, for.

So “our” history is very often hidden, distorted and forgotten so that those in power can convince us that the way things are—that the situations we find ourselves in—is what must be, will always be, has always been, etc. This reinforces the view that we are powerless to change things and that the best we can do is to take care of our own selves and those we care about.

We all know about—or even grew up in—families that prefer to hide childhood abuse because it is ugly, damaging, better forgotten. But what happens? Those scars fester and emerge in different ways that are far more destructive than recognizing and reconciling past abuses. The same is true for our society. We hate to think that our heroes or traditions or our collective “progress” might have an unpleasant side or back-story or even a totally different reality—because it challenges what we feel are our core values and belief systems—our ways of coping.

Nurses as healers

Racism in our society exists as an institution, built precisely on the legacy of a lot of “hidden” history. And like all oppression and abuse, its legacy, scars and its ongoing impact on the lives of ALL OF US will continue to haunt us and dominate our world until and unless we recognize it and reconcile it. I say “all of us” because oppression in any of its forms harms the oppressed, for sure, but dehumanizes the oppressor and ultimately does damage to any group or individual who reaps its benefits, even if unconsciously.

So to build an egalitarian society starts at home, in the workplace and in the community in which we live. It requires a commitment to deal with painful and unpleasant issues. It doesn’t change things overnight. But the alternative is to allow hatred and violence to consume us all and that road will only end in more tragedies and horrors.

And now what?

Many Germans ignored the Nazis post WWI. But other disgruntled countrymen, deep down in their psyches, kind of appreciated that these so-called ‘fanatics’ were standing up for them, recognizing their value—even their superiority—as “true Germans,” and responding to their perception that the world was treating them unfairly.

Our future and our survival depend on the belief that we CAN create a loving society—if not for our generation, then at least for our children and grandchildren.

There’s no time like now to start building that future.
Emergency preparedness

Healthcare institutions are not only particularly needed for disasters, but they are particularly vulnerable to disasters.

Baum. “You have to be prepared both internally and externally. Internally, what happens if we have infrastructure damage or lose emergency services? Externally, what happens if the disaster results in a massive intake of patients?”

Conducting drills

Under the new Emergency Preparedness Rule, healthcare facilities must conduct at least two drills a year. One must be a full-scale drill, complete with emergency services. The other can be a facility-based table-top drill, where participants in a room are presented with a scenario. Because nurses are on the front lines, we must be fully educated about our facilities’ emergency preparedness plans, including regulatory requirements, guidelines and the criteria for disaster risk assessment.

The following emergency preparedness guidelines have been issued by The Joint Commission, a CMS-approved accrediting organization:

- In the event of an emergency, healthcare facilities must be able to communicate internally and externally despite the possible loss of communication systems;
- Utilities need to enable the facility to be self-sufficient for as long as possible—with a goal of 96 hours;
- Supplies must address potential vulnerabilities and be maintained at adequate levels; staff must have clear roles and responsibilities in an emergency;
- Security measures must be taken to enable normal operations and protect staff and the facility; and
- There must be a plan in place for maintaining patient care and supporting vulnerable populations, including possible alternate standards of care.

Part of developing an emergency preparedness plan means looking beyond general disasters and determining any potential local risks or emergencies a facility might face. “During H1N1, the emergency rooms were overwhelmed,” says Baum. “You have to have a plan in place for protecting staff because you’re screwed if the public and staff are sick.”

Protecting staff

As nurses, we are known for being dedicated responders who put patient care first. Healthcare facilities must consider that in an emergency, nurses and healthcare workers will need support to be effective.

Says Baum: “Where are they going to sleep? How will they get food? You must consider child and elder care. Pay attention to their families so they can do their jobs. You need to remember that your staff are human beings.”

Healthcare facilities have until November 15 to meet the requirements of the CMS rule and must comply in order to receive federal reimbursement for Medicare and Medicaid. Ultimately, Baum feels this is good for both nurses and the public.

“You can’t be too prepared or assume that will never happen to us.”

How you can help Houston now

Mayor Turner establishes Hurricane Harvey Relief Fund

After receiving an overwhelming number of inquiries from citizens and companies who want to help, Mayor Sylvester Turner has established the Hurricane Harvey Relief Fund that will accept tax deductible flood relief donations for victims that have been affected by the recent floods. The fund will be housed at the Greater Houston Community Foundation, a 501(c)(3) public charity.

Standing our ground!

In the past months, our union has displayed leadership in the protection of patients and their communities on every level. The onslaught against the Affordable Care Act, with a plan that would devastate healthcare for millions of families was an all-out attempt at undercutting healthcare in America while transferring billions of dollars to the richest people in our country.

Working with other unions, healthcare consumer groups, elected officials, health care providers, religious organizations, immigrant rights groups, community based organizations, public health professionals and many others, we joined forces to stop the dangerous legislative proposals for now. But we must remain vigilant as Congress reconvenes in early September!

As nurses we bring both moral and professional authority which is very powerful. People listen when we speak out against any plan that puts our patients in jeopardy, our communities at risk and our professional standards in question.

Congressional stalemate

After months of trying, it became clear that a sizable group in Congress had no real plans to replace the Affordable Care Act, or to move the country towards guaranteed health care for all. Rather, this group was exposed for trying to eliminate the ACA, and in doing so, destroy healthcare altogether. Many senators found themselves in a quagmire because all of the proposals were extremely unpopular across all demographics. The various versions of the legislation never got above 20% approval from the country as a whole!

The Administration and Senate Republicans floundered amongst a variety of different plans that would have deprived millions of Americans of health insurance and done little to contain the high costs that make it hard for poorer, sicker people to have their medical needs taken care of.

This July, the Senate failed to pass three different repeal bills. One bill, which would have undermined the ACA’s protections for people with pre-existing conditions and cut Medicaid so significantly that the Congressional Budget Office estimated it would throw millions of people off of health insurance, failed by 10 votes.

Another bill, which would have eliminated all of the ACA’s subsidies for poor and middle-class people to buy health insurance and which was estimated to throw 32 million people off of health insurance, failed by 7 votes.

The Senate came closest to passing a bill that simply would have eliminated the mandates for individuals to buy health insurance and for large employers to provide it. The bill would have further destabilized the health insurance market and was unpopular even amongst Senators who voted for it. However, Republican Senator Susan Collins of Maine, Republican Senator Lisa Murkowski of Alaska, and Republican Senator John McCain of Arizona joined with Democrats and voted against it, sinking the bill.

Some in Congress are not giving up, however, and are moving on with several different replacement proposals. One bad proposal is Senator Lindsay Graham’s legislation. His bill would give funds to each state to allow them to provide health insurance for their residents, but the way the funds would be distributed would penalize large states like New York with high Medicaid populations. New York would struggle to provide health insurance for New Yorkers, and hospital budgets would suffer significantly.

There are other proposals that are emerging as we go to press. Republican Senator Lamar Alexander and Democratic Senator Patty Murray are holding hearings on how to contain rising premiums on the individual market, and on how to ensure that everyone who buys health insurance as an individual has access to a health insurance plan. Several Republicans and Democrats in the House have formed a “Problem Solvers Caucus” and have put together a proposal that also seeks to contain premiums. Their proposal would put more money towards the sickest patients, but it would also allow states to limit the amount of health insurance provided to consumers, depriving them of comprehensive care.

Uncertainty rattles health insurers

The Administration has threatened to not fund subsidies provided for in the ACA that reduce copays and deductibles for people buying insurance on the individual market. Without certainty that these funds will come through, health insurance companies have been planning to raise premiums and threatening to pull out of certain areas entirely, making it much harder for many people to buy health insurance. In fact, in recent days, some insurers, including here in New York State, have pulled out threatening chaos in the healthcare of New Yorkers and Americans.

NYSNA has stood its ground: we demand that no plan take away existing coverage and we seek to build alliances in and out of government towards the goal of real guaranteed healthcare for all. In New York State, we have the right policy to bring this chaos to an end. The New York Health Act, passed by the state assembly and supported by 32 members of the state senate would not only protect New Yorkers from losing their healthcare, but also ensure that everyone gets the care they need! A new bill will be introduced soon in the US Senate by Senator Bernie Sanders of Vermont that would also guarantee healthcare for all in a Medicare For All system. It deserves our support! The determination of our members resonates in our hospitals, communities and in government institutions. We will not back down!

A conversation with Bellevue RN Todd Schultz

Todd Schultz, RN, BSN, CPAN, grew up in Ohio, but has made his home in NYC since 2006. He spoke to New York Nurse this month.

NYN: When and why did you decide to become a nurse?

TS: I like to say that nursing chose me. I worked my way up starting as an EMT, then an LPN, an associate degree RN, BSN, and am now finishing my master’s degree in nursing education. Through each step, I have had incredible nurse mentors and educators that have guided my career path.

NYN: You must be proud to be a part of a revered institution — Bellevue Hospital — and a public hospital system with doors open to all. Can you speak to that?

TS: It is an absolute honor to serve at Bellevue Hospital, and it’s beyond humbling to know that we get the opportunity to work in the oldest hospital in the country, as part of an incredible team of medical professionals that provide world-class care to NYC.

NYN: What are the most significant issues facing nurses at Bellevue today? How do you assign priority to them?

TS: We share the same concerns as other hospitals all around the country, with safe staffing and evidence-based nurse-to-patient ratios that have been proven to control system costs and directly benefit patient outcomes.

NYN: How would you describe your role as president of the LBU? Are there any changes planned in how it operates?

TS: Anne Bové, RN, was a dedicated LBU president, and I consider myself very lucky to have her as a mentor throughout this transition process. Our LBU leadership team continues to be dedicated to protecting safe staffing conditions and remains committed to strengthening the profession of nursing at Bellevue and throughout NY state.

NYN: How do we achieve guaranteed healthcare for all?

TS: The enduring mission of Bellevue Hospital, to provide quality care to all without regard for their ability to pay, is a mission statement that needs to be expanded to a state and national level. Quality healthcare should not be treated as a commodity only rationed out to those that can afford it. It is our patriotic and moral duty to provide care for all members of our community. Our elected leaders need to know that we will no longer stand for a broken, stratified healthcare system that enriches insurance company CEOs while bankrupting patients. Nurses need to step up and lead this charge with their voices and their votes and encourage their friends and families to do the same.

RNs at Dominican Day Parade

NYNSA members donned their red, white and blue on August 13th at the 35th Annual Dominican Day Parade in Manhattan. Thousands of revelers lined 5th Avenue for the celebration of Dominican culture, music, folklore and dance that occurs the second Sunday in August each year. More than half a million Dominicans live in New York City, the second-largest Dominican community in the world behind Santo Domingo.

Celebrating diversity

This year’s Grand Marshal was Rep. Adriano Espaillat (D-13), the first Dominican-American to serve in the United States Congress. The parade was dedicated to the memory of fallen police officer Miosotis Familia, who was killed on July 5, 2017 in the Bronx. Familia was posthumously honored with a lifetime service award. NYNSA was thrilled to have Shino Aguakate, a popular merengue group, perform on our float. Parade-goers cheered as nurses danced down the route and advocated for quality healthcare for all New Yorkers.

This was NYNSA’s second appearance in the Dominican Day Parade. Member Minerva Concepcion Green, RN, articulated the importance of nurses taking part in this event: “I work at New York Presbyterian on 181st Street, right in the heart of the Dominican community. It’s important—especially now—to show unity and celebrate diversity because our patients are very diverse,” said Concepcion Green.
Yes to humanity. No to bigotry.
WHILE WHITE SUPREMACISTS and supporters marched in Charlottesville on August 11, protests opposed to their anti-Semitic shouts and racist slurs were strong. The killing of Heather Heyer by a neo-Nazi participant the following day, August 12, and the deaths of two police officers on duty, brought a death count to these horrible days. While there was ambiguity from the Administration surrounding the Charlottesville events, voices from across the political spectrum denounced the marchers in very certain terms. New York Nurse has drawn a selection of quotes from these bipartisan voices, and they are shared below.

There are not many sides to the violence of last night and today – these actions and this speech are a poison and serve to bring us all down to the lowest and most un-American of moments. I stand united with the many voices who call this out for what it is – hate, ignorance and bigotry and I join all who loudly speak out in truth and condemnation.

Andrew Cuomo, Governor, NY, D

We mourn the senseless loss of Heather Heyer, and pray for the quick recovery of all those injured. We believe in fighting hate with love, and will continue to live and act by that core value of our union.

George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU

NO MATTER who you are, your own background, or that of your family members or loved ones, your solidarity is necessary to build a better world. Now is the time to stand together.

Naomi Klein, author

We are going to pray for those that were assaulted, those that were killed, and for those that have hatred in their hearts, that somehow it can be dissipated and that they can join the ranks of the rest of us that want a better world, a more peaceful world.

Dolores Huerta, labor leader

You cannot be an ally and stay silent and complacent in the face of oppression/hatred/murder.

Gabrielle Union, performer

Our youth deserve better!! Flat out.

LeBron James, athlete

AMERICA must always reject racial bigotry, anti-Semitism, and hatred in all forms. As we pray for Charlottesville, we are reminded of the fundamental truths recorded by that city’s most prominent citizen in the Declaration of Independence: we are all created equal and endowed by our Creator with unalienable rights. We know these truths to be everlasting because we have seen the decency and greatness of our country.

Joint Statement of Presidents George H.W. Bush and George W. Bush

NOW is the time for leaders to be strong in their words and deliberate in their actions...We will not step backward. If this is not who we are as Americans, let’s prove it.

Hillary Clinton

THERE’S no moral equivalency between racists and Americans standing up to defy hate and bigotry. The President of the United States should say so.

White supremacists aren’t patriots, they’re traitors – Americans must unite against hatred and bigotry Charlottesville.

John McCain, Senator, Arizona, R

The violence in Charlottesville was caused by neo-Nazis and white supremacists attempting to spread their hateful and racist ideology.

Bernie Sanders, Senator, Vermont, IND

It was a despicable act in Charlottesville, Virginia and I think it’s critically important, all over the country, for people to speak out against this kind of intolerance, this kind of hatred, and this kind of racism.

Byron Brown, Mayor, Buffalo, D

THE VIOLENCE in Charlottesville was caused by racists and hate groups. We must unite against them.

Susan Collins, Senator, Maine, R

One side is racist, bigoted, Nazi. The other opposes racism and bigotry. [They are] morally different universes.

Mitt Romney, Former Governor, Massachusetts, R

We must stand united against hate. I am thankful for the East Bay’s bold leadership to stand against such hatred in our community.

Barbara Lee, Congresswoman, CA, D

Let’s stand up for the targets of the hate groups who have descended on Charlottesville. ... What I’m seeing is unvarnished Nazism. ‘Blood and soil’ mixed with weapons is a terrible echo of the past.

Olivia Wilde, actress

[Olivia shared this post from her mother, who is running for Congress in VA]

PEOPLE must learn to hate, and if they can learn to hate, they can be taught to love

Barack Obama

As a society, it is incumbent upon all of us to forcefully repudiate all expressions of white supremacy, racial hatred, and bigotry.

RoseAnn DeMoro, Executive Director, National Nurses United

The abhorrent acts of hatred on display in Charlottesville are an attack on the unity of our nation and therefore summon us all to fervent prayer and peaceful action.

Cardinal Daniel DiNardo, President, U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops

The Army doesn’t tolerate racism, extremism, or hatred in our ranks. It’s against our values and everything we’ve stood for since 1775.

General Mark A. Milley, U.S. Army

Let’s get real. There is no moral equivalency to Nazi sympathizers. There can be no room in America — or the Republican party — for racism, anti-Semitism, hate or white nationalism. Period.

John Kasich, Governor, Ohio, R

This was an act motivated by a philosophy of hate and white supremacy. It is an unacceptable philosophy that goes against the very values of this nation.

Bill de Blasio, Mayor, NYC, D

Preserving history doesn’t require us glorifying the villain.

John Legend, performer

My heart is heavy over the events in Charlottesville, VA. There’s only one side. We have to denounce hate, racism, anti-Semitism, xenophobia and domestic terrorism.

Letitia James, Public Advocate, NYC, D

We should never hesitate to call out hate. Whenever and wherever we see it. We should call evil by its name. My brother didn’t give his life fighting Hitler for Nazi ideas to go unchallenged here at home.

Orrin Hatch, Senator, Utah, R

The hate and bigotry witnessed in Charlottesville does not reflect American values. I wholeheartedly oppose their actions.

Mitch McConnell, US Senate Majority Leader, Kentucky, R

If anyone had a question about what the KKK represented, they were answered quite fully by what they saw in Charlottesville.

Andrea Stewart-Cousins, Speaker, NYS Assembly, D

I PRAY a true leader will rise to expel hatred from America. This is NOT US! This is Anti-American.

Lady Gaga, performer

What “White Nationalist” are doing in Charlottesville is homegrown terrorism that can’t be tolerated anymore.

Chuck Grassley, US Senator, Iowa, R

Our thoughts & prayers with victims of violence in Charlottesville, Virginia. Hatred has no place in our discourse.

Brian Kolb, NY State Assembly, R

AS A DOMINICAN WOMAN, a product of the Trans-Atlantic slave trade, I stand in solidarity with everyone threatened by white supremacist ideology and everyone who seeks to practice tolerance in a free and open society.

Marisol Alcantara, NYS Senate, D

We are better than this....I REPEAT WE ARE BETTER THAN THIS! I will continue to use my talents to bring us closer together!

Kevin Hart, performer

The Nazis, the KKK, and white supremacists are repulsive and evil, and all of us have a moral obligation to speak out against the lies, bigotry, anti-Semitism, and hatred that they propagate.

Ted Cruz, US Senator, Texas, R

Very important for the nation to hear @potus describe events in #Charlottesville for what they are, a terror attack by #whitesupremacists”

Marco Rubio, US Senator, Florida, R

Hatred, violence, bigotry, anti-Semitism and racism are sins against goodness and love. They sit at the center of evil.

There is no defense or justification for evil in the form of white supremacists and Nazis. None.

Dean Heller, Senator, Nevada, R

Charlottesville violence was fueled by one side: white supremacists spreading racism, intolerance & intimidation. Those are the facts.”

Tim Kaine, Senator, Virginia, D

NEO-NAZIS, Klansmen and white supremacists came to Charlottesville heavily armed, spewing hatred and looking for a fight. One of them murdered a young woman in an act of domestic terrorism, and two of our finest officers were killed in a tragic accident while serving to protect this community. This was not ‘both sides’.

Terry McAuliffe, Governor, Virginia, D

[R]EAL HEROES emerged who deserve our praise and admiration: Heather Heyer, who was killed speaking out against racism…. Fighting systemic racism is the new abolition movement.

No more Charlottesvilles!

We watched in horror as the events in Charlottesville unfolded on Friday night, August 11. Ranks of young men arrived in this renowned college town with clubs, shields, pepper spray and guns prepared to do battle ostensibly to protect a statue of Confederate hero General Robert E. Lee. But their rhetoric, blaring on social media, displayed a racist, extremist ideology, some with neo-Nazi phraseology and ugly nativist slurs. Some wore pins with the number “88,” a number that serves as shorthand for Heil Hitler. They were a mob of white supremacists looking to grab national attention. And they succeeded in that regard.

Pickup trucks full of torches arrived, and within minutes hundreds of supporters were on the scene and with military precision they formed a lengthy procession, marching, torches alight, through the campus of the University of Virginia.

Charlottesville martyr

The next day, members of organizations, such as Vanguard America, Identity Evropa, the Traditionalist Workers Party and True Cascada, returned, standing their ground at the park, home to the Lee statue. (There are 700 statues and plaques commemorating the Confederacy in the U.S. today. To many, these symbols “honor people who took up arms … to maintain slavery,” wrote the New York Times on August 18.)

Sitting behind the wheel of his Dodge Challenger, a young neo-Nazi let loose, as a crowd of protesters had gathered in the park area as well. He ran down 20, killing 32-year old Heather Heyer and putting others in the hospital, some in serious condition.

The outraged mounted. White supremacy, racial slurs, Nazi symbols… death and injury.

We joined the protests in New York City that same day, marching from the Dominican Day Parade directly to a rally on Fifth Avenue. NYSNA members were there, outraged and demanding an end to the racist, anti-Semitic white supremacist attack on civil society. Civil rights and social justice are a foundation of our union’s principles.

A mother’s plea

“This is just the beginning of Heather’s legacy,” said her mother, Susan Bro, at a memorial to her slain daughter the Wednesday following her death. “This is not the end of Heather’s legacy. You need to find in your heart that small spark of accountability. What is there that I can do to make the world a better place?”

Stop the forces of hate

The following week, NYSNA members joined hundreds in commemoration of Heather Heyer. Performer Michael Moore was there, as were actors Mark Ruffalo and Olivia Wilde. Sadness over the loss of Heather Heyer pervaded those gathered on Fifth Avenue in NYC. But that sentiment was largely offset with determination to stop the forces of hate: white supremacists, racists and their supporters.

As nurses, we see the profound effects of bigotry on our communities, and we will fight against it in all its shapes and forms.

Section 2. These bylaws may be amended without previous notice at any meeting by 99% of the Convention voting body present and voting.

RATIONALE: This proposal creates a more unified, democratic structure of governance for NYSNA. It expands the representative nature of Congress, and invests it with the authority of Voting Body. Starring in the summer of 2018, delegates will be elected to represent their Local Bargaining Units (as well as retired and non-represented members) at the NYSNA Convention for a three-year term. The proposal protects principles of proportionate representation for the larger LBUs and also ensures that smaller facilities will have an important voice at Convention. This proposal will eliminate the current practice of having staggered elections for statewide offices. Although sitting Board members elected in 2016 will have their term of office cut short by one year in order to run all delegate and statewide elections at the same time in 2018, this abbreviated term will not count towards existing term limits. Thus, if adopted, this means that there will be an election in 2018 for every Officer and Board of Directors seat. Those elected in 2016 whose terms were set to expire in 2019 will be allowed to run for one additional term in the same office in 2018. If they are re-elected in 2018, they will be allowed to serve one additional full term in the same position and one additional full term on the Board.

RECOMMENDATION #2 – ELIMINATE ELECTION OF OFFICERS FOR PRACTICE FOCUS GROUPS

ARTICLE VIII – PRACTICE FOCUS GROUPS

Section 1. Each practice focus group shall have an executive committee composed of a chairperson, one vice chairperson and ten members at large. The chairperson and two members at large shall be elected at the annual meeting in the even year to serve a term of two years, the remaining members at large shall be elected at the annual meeting in the odd year to serve for a term of two years.

b. Each executive committee shall be responsible for the business of the group.

c. Executive committee members will serve on the group’s representative to the NYSNA Council on Nursing Practice.

Section 6. Terms

No member of the executive committee of a practice focus group shall serve more than two consecutive terms in the same office nor a total of more than eight consecutive years.

Section 7. Vacancies

a) In the event of a vacancy occurring in the office of chairperson of a practice focus group, the chairperson shall serve as chairperson for the remainder of the chairperson’s term.

b) In the event of a vacancy occurring in the office of vice chairperson or member at large, the vacancy will be filled by appointment of the Board of Directors.

c) Absent from two consecutive regular meetings of an executive committee of the Council on Nursing Practice shall be cause for declaring a vacancy in the position. Such vacancy shall be declared by majority vote of the Board of Directors.

Section 8. Practice focus groups may be dissolved by a two-thirds vote of the Board of Directors, upon agreement by the Board of Directors and the respective group that there is no reason for its continuance; or upon determination by the Board of Directors that it is no longer necessary for the purpose or to conform to the principles and requirement of this association.

ARTICLE XII – NOMINATIONS

Section 5. Members shall be eligible to serve in only one elective position in NYSNA at any one time. Elective positions of NYSNA are: board of directors (officers and directors); nominating committee; election committees; executive committee; Credentials Committee; executive committee of the Congress of Local Bargaining Unit Leaders, provided that all those members currently sitting in multiple positions would be allowed to complete their terms.

RATIONALE: Officer elections take up a substantial amount of time during Practice Focus Group meetings every year, and PFG officers do not have a real organizational role in-between meetings. This change removes an outdated mandate from our bylaws and will free up time for NYSNA members to discuss substantive practice issues during Practice Focus Group meetings.

RECOMMENDATION #3 – ELIMINATE CONSTITUENT DISTRICT NURSE ASSOCIATIONS IN NYSNA’S NEW STRUCTURE

Section 4. Functions

By Judy Sheridan-Gonzalez, RN
NYSNA President

From Buffalo to Brooklyn, the influence of corporations and profiteers is spreading across our healthcare system. NYSNA members are on the frontlines, protecting our patients, our profession, and the public’s access to care. Over the past five years we’ve made major changes to the way the union functions, improving our structure and activating thousands of nurses for the first time. But we have to do more.

As employers try to roll back hard-won job standards, as Congress’ right wing moves to dismantle health insurance for millions, and while the Supreme Court threatens union stability, our biggest battles lie ahead of us. If nurses and health care workers are going to secure our own futures—and those of our communities—we’ll need the power that only a strong union can provide. This requires moving even more members into action and developing thousands more leaders.

Meeting the challenges

How can our organization become equipped to meet these challenges? In response to members’ needs and the reality that confronts us, our Board of Directors is recommending three important changes to the bylaws to ensure that NYSNA’s structure can rise to confront the tasks ahead.

The first, and most important, is creating a broad, democratic and transparent decision-making structure at the top of our union. We are proposing that, starting in 2018, members elect representatives from our local bargaining units to represent us in NYSNA’s highest governing body, our Convention. Every local bargaining unit will be guaranteed at least one delegate, with additional delegates elected, based on size.

To guarantee representation, delegates would be elected as follows: 1 delegate for every 50 LBU members up to 200, and 1 delegate for every 100 members over 200. So a facility with 120 members would elect three delegates; an LBU with 330 members, would elect six delegates, and so on.

This formula ensures universal representation, but allows smaller facilities to maintain an important voice in NYSNA. Active members not in an LBU would elect representatives based on this formula, as would retiree members within each region.

Recognizing that situations emerge that might create obstacles to attendance, alternate provisions are included to address this. The proposal also includes stipulations that would allow for adequate preparation, discussion and oversight of resolutions, motions and issues.

To avoid the cumbersome, confusing and costly practice of staggered elections, NYSNA delegates would be elected for three-year terms at the same time that Board offices would be filled. Thus, there would be an election for all Board of Directors seats and statewide officers, along with Convention delegates, in 2018. This practice would enhance voter turnout as members would be voting for people they know on a day-to-day level, along with Board members they may only have read or heard about.

Bylaw changes

This Bylaws proposal is similar to the way almost every union—including nurses unions—conducts business. Recommendations were formulated after years of studying other unions’ structures, talking with nurses from many states, and consultation with, suggestions by and support from LBU leaders throughout NYSNA, including officers from the Congress of Local Bargaining Unit Leaders. The Congress itself would be expanded and merged with the Voting Body under the proposal. Clearly, drawing hundreds more elected leaders into decision-making is an important step to strengthening NYSNA and building our collective power.

Two other important bylaw changes are being proposed. Responding to member concerns that PGs need more time for discussion and less time for unnecessary bureaucracy, the Board recommends the elimination of officer elections in these groups. This would allow for the entire meeting to take on substantive practice issues.

The other measure proposed is a housekeeping one: to eliminate the Constituent District Nurse Associations (CDNAs) from our bylaws, as they are independent, autonomous organizations—and have been for a while. Their presence in our bylaws—a leftover from years past—exposes NYSNA to legal liability under federal labor law. This would allow the CDNAs—should they desire—to continue working with NYSNA as organizational affiliates in accordance with Article II, Section 2 of the bylaws.
